

Salvador Dalí (1904–1989) – Surrealism

Salvador Dalí (Spain, 1904–1989)

"Surrealism"

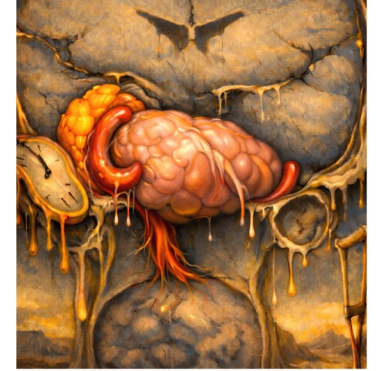

The Persistence of Memory (1931)

Metamorphosis of Narcissus (1937)

The Elephants (1948)

NeuroArt (2026)

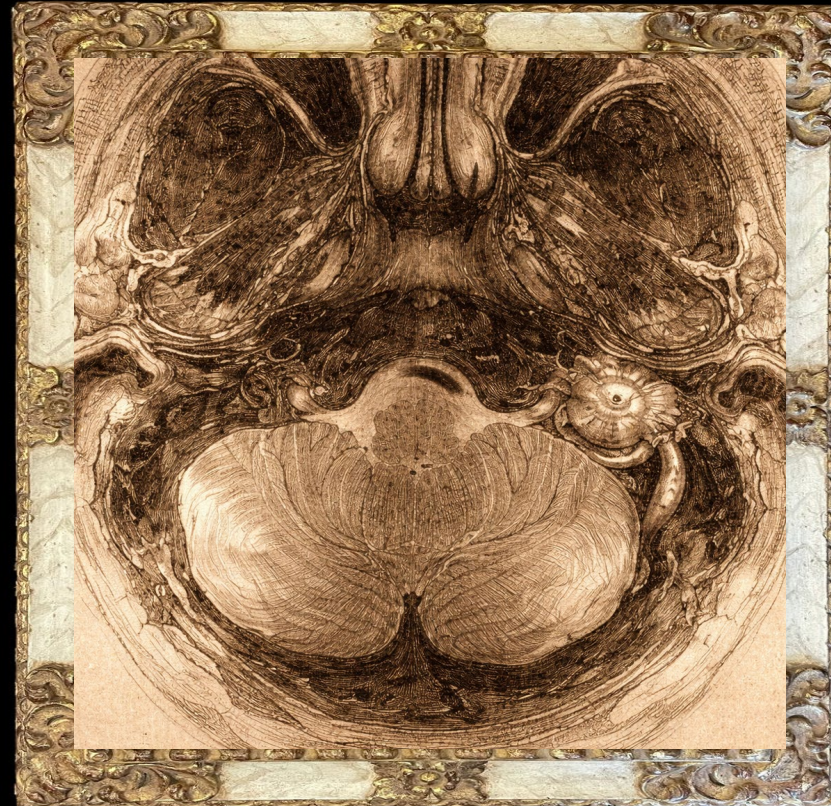

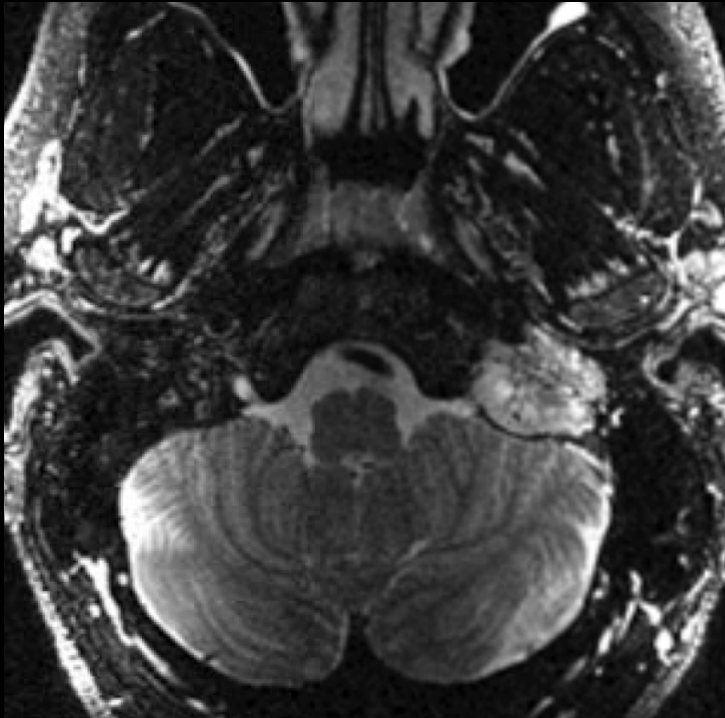

Period essence:

- Exploration of the subconscious and dreams
- Influence of Freud and psychoanalysis

Dalí's style:

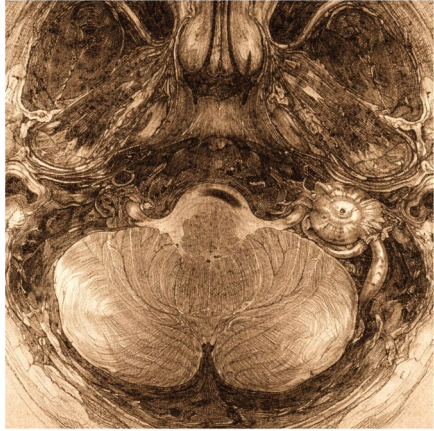

- Hyper-realistic technique
- Illogical, dreamlike imagery
- Symbolism and visual paradox

Leonardo da Vinci (1452–1519) – High Renaissance

Leonardo da Vinci (Italy, 1452–1519)

“High Renaissance”

NeuroArt (2026)

Mona Lisa (1503-1517)

Lady with an Ermine (≈1490)

Period essence:

- Birth of scientific realism in art
- Fusion of anatomy, optics, geometry, and philosophy

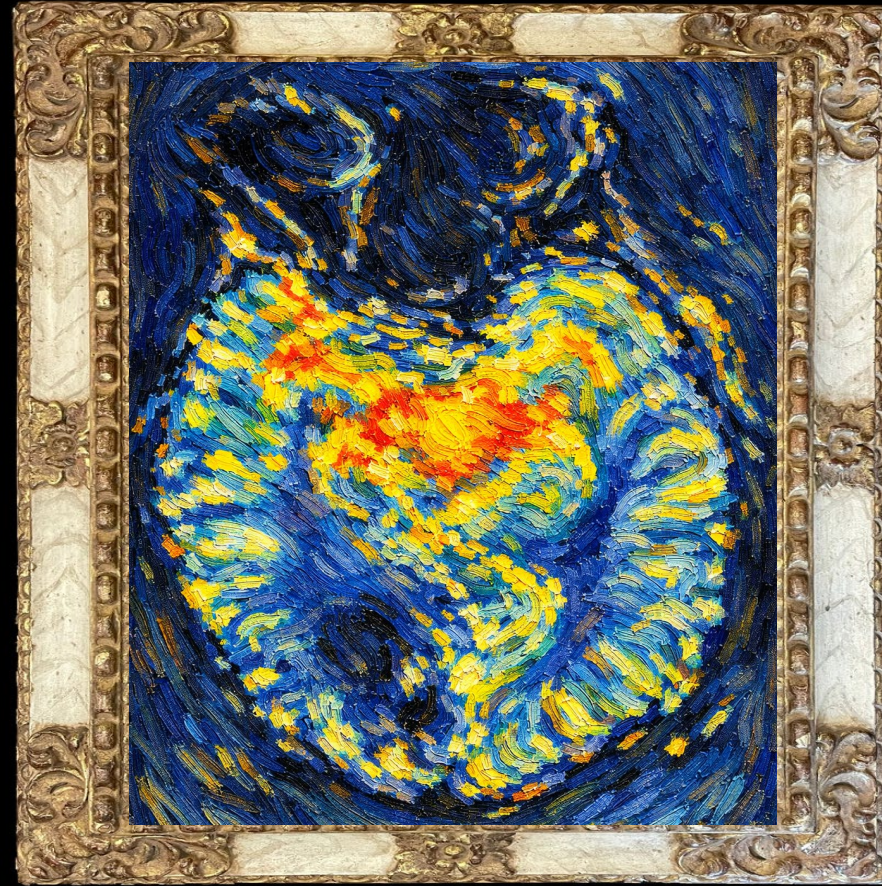

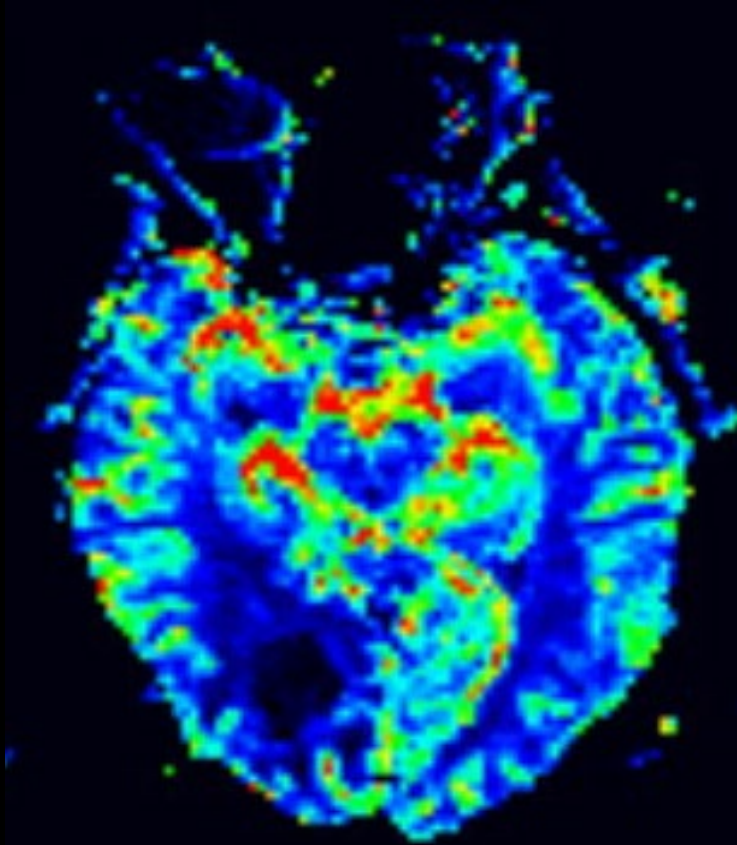

da Vinci's style:

- Sfumato (smoky, soft transitions)
- Anatomical precision
- Calm, intellectual composition

Saint Jerome in the Wilderness (≈1480)

Vincent van Gogh (1853–1890) – Post-Impressionism

Vincent van Gogh (Netherlands, 1853–1890)

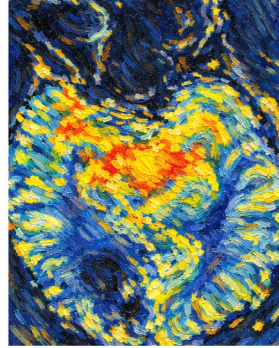

"Post-Impressionism"

The Bedroom (1888)

The Starry Night (1889)

NeuroArt (2026)

Period essence:

- Reaction against Impressionism's detachment
- Emotion, symbolism, and psychological depth

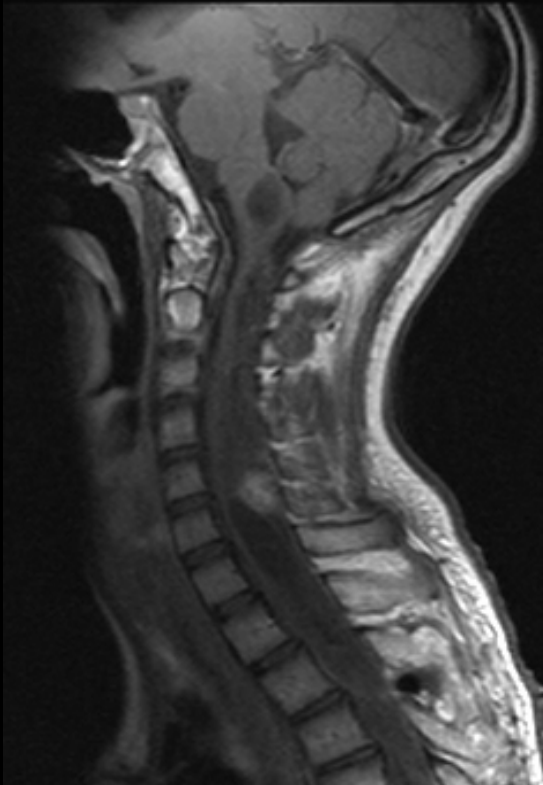

Van Gogh's style:

- Thick impasto brushwork
- Intense, expressive color
- Movement and emotional turbulence

Café Terrace at Night (1888)

Pablo Picasso (1881–1973) – Cubism / Modernism

Pablo Picasso (Spain, 1881–1973)

"Cubism / Early Modernism"

The Weeping Woman (1937)

Bust of a woman with a hat (1962)

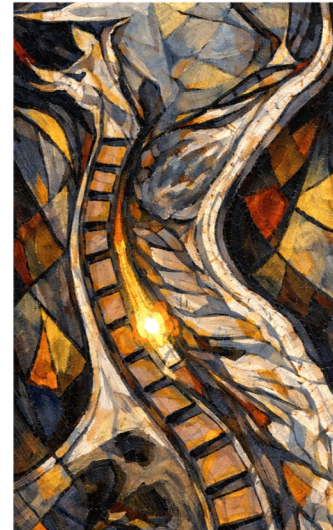

Jacqueline with flowers (1954)

Period essence:

- Radical break from traditional perspective
- Objects shown from multiple viewpoints

Picasso's style:

- Fragmented geometry
- Deconstructed faces and bodies
- Intellectual, analytical vision

NeuroArt (2026)

Claude Monet (1840–1926) – Impressionism

Claude Monet (France, 1840–1926)

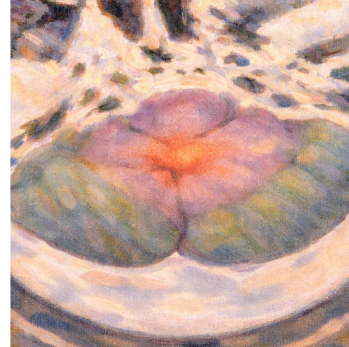

"Impressionism"

Impression, Sunrise (1872)

Water Lilies series (1896 - 1926)

NeuroArt (2026)

Period essence:

- Capturing momentary perception rather than detail
- Light, atmosphere, and time over form

Monet's style:

- Broken brushstrokes
- Vibrant, shifting light
- Same subject painted repeatedly at different times

Woman with a Parasol (1875)